

Food Writing Class at Gateway Community College, Spring Semester 2017 with Priscilla Martel

January 4, 2017 - Connecticut food writer Priscilla Martel, former restaurateur and author of two best-selling culinary textbooks On Cooking and On Baking, brings back her course on food writing for the third year to Gateway Community College in New Haven, CT. "Everyone has their own flavorful story to tell," says Martel. "You don't have to have years of experience to write about food, who is cooking it, how it is being served and what food means," says Martel. Food Writing (HSP-I249) is open to anyone who has a particular passion about food and wants to find a voice and mode of expression for writing about it.

Food Writing (HSP-I249) will be offered on Tuesday evenings from 5:25 to 8:15 PM starting Tuesday January 24, 2017. It runs for 15 weeks through May. Classes meet at the Gateway Community College Downtown New Haven campus Room S106.

Aspiring restaurant critics, food bloggers, restaurant publicists and those with yearning to explore a particular food are all welcome in this class. The 15-week class will cover blogging, memoir writing, restaurant reviewing, recipe writing and food business promotion. Martel's food-writing colleagues will be guest speakers that share their valuable practical tips on career success. "Bring your willingness to write," says Martel of a class that will appeal to students in the hospitality, business, entrepreneurship and liberal arts programs as well as the general public.

Curiosity and enthusiasm led Martel to start her career by opening Restaurant du Village in Chester, CT in 1979. She and Charlie van Over wanted to recreate the kind of village restaurant only found in rural France. Her experience as a restaurant chef gave her the opportunity to start writing about food in the 1990's. "My food writing reflects my interest and experience," she says of a career writing recipes, educational materials and about food trend articles. "Everyone has their story and way of telling it," she says. The class will help students develop their food vocabulary and communication skills. "This class offers anyone the opportunity to talk about food whether their experience is as a cook or consumer."

For more information contact Stephen Fries, Coordinator Hospitality Management Programs at Gateway. Call 203-285-2175 or email Stephen directly at sfries@gatewayct.edu Or contact Priscilla Martel at pm@priscillamartel.com